

DIFFERENT PARTS OF A TENNIS COURT

BASELINE: The lines at the far ends of the court, parallel to the net. Players serve from behind the baseline must not hit over it during rallies.

SERVICE LINE: The line that runs parallel to the net and is midway between the baseline and the net. It marks the boundary of the service boxes.

CENTER SERVICE LINE: The line that runs perpendicular to the net and divides the service boxes into left and right halves.

SERVICE BOXES: The two rectangular areas on either side of the center service line where serves must land. There are four service boxes in total, two on each side of the net.

DIFFERENT PARTS OF A TENNIS COURT

DOUBLES SIDELINE: The outermost lines running along the length of the court, marking the boundary for doubles matches.

SINGLES SIDELINE: The inner lines running parallel to the doubles sidelines. These lines mark the boundary for singles matches.

NET: The net divides the court into two equal halves and stands 3 feet high at the center and 3.5 feet high at the posts. Players must hit the ball over the net during rallies.

CENTER MARK: A small line extending from the middle of the baseline towards the court, used to guide the server's position during serves.
